

QUESTIONING AND DISCUSSION- BLOOM'S QUESTION CARDS

Readers who engage in higher-order thinking go beyond the basic levels of comprehension. They can analyze, synthesize, evaluate, and interpret the text they are reading at complex levels. They can process text at deep levels, make judgments, and detect shades of meaning. These students fare well on standardized tests and are considered to be advanced.

BLOOM'S QUESTION/VERB CARDS are used in a number of ways in the classroom. They have the opportunity to listen to the questions, ask their own questions, respond individually and within teams.

The BLOOM'S QUESTION/VERB CARDS are graduated in color. BLOOM'S QUESTION/VERB CARDS support the Danielson Teaching Framework 3b- USING QUESTIONING AND DISCUSSION TECHNIQUES.

BLOOM'S COLORS

The colors of the cards define the depth of questions and also the grouping for response.

WHITE/YELLOW

Right There questions that require finding the answer quickly by scanning the text. This is completed individually.

“Vested in your school’s achievement”

GOLD/ORANGE

Think Deeper questions that require you to find evidence and make inferential responses. This is completed in partners.

MAGENTA/ORANGE

I Wonder questions that require collecting evidence from the text, creating inferences and applying all of this information into a synthesized answer. This is completed at the table level.
